

experts with the idea of learning the true condition of Thaw's mind, not with the idea of bolstering up a pre-arranged case.

Watched During His Trial.
Mr. Jerome's course in permitting Dr. Britton D. Evans, a defense expert, to start yesterday to tell all that caused him to believe Thaw's story is looked upon as a possible indication that he will call for an official examination. Before the trial Jerome was unable to have his friends study the story, but when the trial began, Jan. 23, he at last could get the opinions of his physicians, who watched Thaw constantly in the court-room.

It was seen, of course, impossible for the lawyers for the defense to prevent the District Attorney from learning for himself the story of the Pittsburgh mind.

Jerome now has testimony of his own, obtained by his own agents, which he can go before Judge Fitzgerald and ask for a commission.

Would Spare Wife and Mother.
In case Thaw is started for Mitford, his wife and mother will escape the terrible ordeals which have been confronting them.

It is possible that when the trial is called again Monday, to which day it was adjourned because of Mrs. Bolger's death, Mr. Jerome will come forward with his request to have Thaw officially examined. He cannot really be tried if he is crazy. If he is sane, however, he can go on with the defense that he was crazy when he killed Stanford White.

Thaw Sought Help from Dr. Strong.
It appears that Anthony Comstock was not the only person Thaw visited when he attempted to commit suicide. Dr. Strong, President of the American Institution for Social Service, contributed chapters to this phase of the case to-day.

Young Thaw called on Dr. Strong about two years ago and introduced himself. Dr. Strong had known his father.

"He told me," said Dr. Strong, "that there was an organized gang of wealthy and influential men, over middle age for the most part, who made a practice of luring and betraying young girls. Their methods, Thaw told me, were simply devilish in ingenuity, persistence and patience."

"The young man did not impress me as one seeking vengeance," he added. "I thought he had made an appalling discovery and was simply trying to get help in wiping out a terrible situation."

Although he did not mention names or addresses, I knew, from what I have read of the evidence given by his wife, that he referred to the case of Stanley.

"I told him that Anthony Comstock was the man for him to see," he said. "I told him that Anthony Comstock was the man for him to see, and I told him that Anthony Comstock was the man for him to see."

FUNERAL OF THAW JUROR'S WIFE TO BE PRIVATE.
George W. Howie, the Fordham undertaker who has charge of the funeral of Mrs. Joseph B. Bolten, wife of Juror No. 11 in the Thaw case, announced to-day that the burial will take place to-morrow at 2 P. M. in the family plot at Woodlawn cemetery.

The funeral will be private, only relatives and close friends of the family attending. The funeral will be held at the house, No. 215 West 125th St., at 10 A. M.

BRITISH PLAN OF HOME RULE FOR IRELAND KNOWN

Elective and Partly Appointive Council to Direct Erin's Affairs.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The interest of all Ireland has been aroused by the announcement made by Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, that the Government is preparing to take steps for the betterment of the Irish people. The Chief Secretary's notice that a bill "for the establishment of an Irish Council and for other purposes connected therewith" is of particular interest. The purpose of this official announcement of the Government's intentions makes it patent that the Liberals will keep their promise to the Nation by introducing Irish legislation precedence at the present session of Parliament.

Probably the most serious problem the Government faced was the question as to how the Council should be created—whether by election or appointment.

The original intention was to make it purely a nominative body, and a bill embodying this plan was drafted. But when it was presented to John Redmond, the Irish leader, he promptly rejected it in that form on the ground that it could not get the Irish support.

Council Mostly Elective.
The new bill will provide for a Council in which elective membership will largely predominate. The minority of nominative members will be admitted simply for the purpose of placating the Liberals, who all along have been bitterly opposed to a purely representative body.

Among the leading Irishmen it is well understood that the Council will be endowed with broad administrative powers, but that in the matter of legislative authority it will be limited.

If the Irish people are to be fully satisfied it will be necessary that the Council shall have broad powers in the matter of finance. It is assumed among the Irish leaders that the powers now delegated to the numerous boards controlling the administrative affairs of Ireland will be turned over entirely to the Council immediately after its organization.

The Brutal Clanricarde.
The further announcement made by Chief Secretary Birrell that a measure is soon to be introduced by which the Government will be empowered to take over the management of the vast estates of the aged Marquis of Clanricarde, one of the largest landholders in Ireland, is looked upon as a step that is likely to be productive of a great deal of good.

The Marquis of Clanricarde has been a subject for denunciation throughout all Great Britain. He has been the object of criticism from the Irish people. The Unionists have been no less outspoken about the aged lord's atrocious treatment of the Liberales.

Clanricarde is landlord over the greater part of County Galway, and it is known far and wide that his brutal treatment of his tenants has had the effect of reducing that part of the country to extreme poverty. The estate alone is valued at $100,000. The average is about $2,000.

Clanricarde has obstinately refused for years to spend a single farthing for the betterment of his tenants or their holdings. The reputation and wreckage he has fostered there is appalling.

His Agent Shot Dead.
From the day that Clanricarde came into possession of his estate he marked his ownership by his exactions. He began by raising the rents and to the point of ruin and then he began to reduce the rents to the point of ruin.

Never but once in his lifetime has he attended the funeral of his father, who died some thirty-three years ago. He was the only son of the Marquis, and he was the only son of the Marquis.

The Marquis is seventy-four years old and never has been married. In the House of Lords he is an utter stranger. No one there can recall ever having seen him in his seat. He lives the life of a hermit in a large apartment in the Albany, London.

NEW LEGS HIS VALENTINE, NOW CAN HELP "MAMMA"

Man Answers Appeal of Georgie McMahon in Evening World.

PAYS FOR NEW LIMBS.

Little Cripple Overjoyed by Prospect of Walking "Like Other Children."

Of all the little boys who were made happy by St. Valentine's day, there is one little nine-year-old chap who received a Valentine from his patron saint of love which will make him happy all the rest of his life.

Other little boys and girls who danced for joy over candy hearts and valentines adorned with cooing doves and little cupids, don't know at all what real happiness is. It remained for a very little boy who couldn't dance for joy to bless St. Valentine with all his own little heart which isn't candy or painted, but just a real little boy's heart.

Mr. Harry Balfe, President of the Soap Baking Powder Company, his patron saint with the biggest heart in all New York.

This story is written because little Georgie McMahon received for his Valentine from Mr. Balfe the money for a new pair of legs. In yesterday's Evening World there was a story about this poor little chap in Kings County Hospital, who wanted some rich person to get him a pair of legs.

He was willing to have some one lend him a pair, just for a little while, if only he could walk like the other children for a spell. Well, it wasn't two hours after "The Evening World" had left the presses until the following letter and a check for $200 was received at The World office.

Good St. Valentine's Letter.
"To the Editor of The Evening World:—Referring to the story on page 11, City Edition, of The Evening World, this date, headed 'Boy Wants Loan of Pair of Legs,' this strikes me as a very sad case."

"Could I ask you to investigate this story, and if it is true please be good enough to hand the proper party the enclosed check for $200, all of which I trust will secure for him a pair of artificial legs, which I sincerely hope will be the means of making him happy."

The name signed to the letter is one connected with one of the business industries in New York. This kind-hearted philanthropist's quick response to the story of little Georgie McMahon has brought more happiness than all the ostentatious display of philanthropy could do.

"I was so impressed with the story in The Evening World," said Mr. Balfe to the reporter, "that I had the check made out immediately. I am only too glad to smooth some of the rough places for this little chap. I wish you would send me his picture and address so that I may keep my eye on him. It may be possible in the future I may help him."

When Georgie was called from among the other children in the recreation room of the Children's Hospital of Kings County, a plump-faced, healthy-looking little creature with frank blue eyes and short cropped brown hair, wriggled his way to the door with surprising alacrity. Like a flash over the floor came this poor maimed little fellow, all interest to know what St. Valentine had brought him.

"Now I Can Help Mamma."
When it was explained that a Mr. Balfe had sent him a Valentine of $200 through The Evening World, he got him a pair of legs. The little boy's eyes filled with tears, while at the same time, with childish variance of emotions, his lips curved in a happy smile.

"Can I really have legs and walk?" he asked as Head Nurse Carter lifted him into a chair. "Then I can help mamma and go to school, and learn to be a bookkeeper. Will it really come true this time? I've dreamed about it so often, too. Can I really go to school?"

"It will really come true, Georgie," it was explained, "and to-morrow you will go to New York in a carriage and have your measurement taken for the new legs."

"When my brother and sister were here, a long time ago—I had legs, and I've been thinking if they came now they wouldn't know me. If I get new ones, I think I'll better than ever, won't they?"

The little fellow, who has received the best Valentine of his life, is an example of childish faith that is pathetic. For three years he has been in the Kings County Hospital, and in that time he has not seen his father. His mother came the last time just at Christmas.

"Mamma had to put brother and sister in a home, when papa went away. She said she didn't have any money to keep them. When I get my legs I'll work and help to buy mamma a new home. I'll send her a Valentine. Then she will know how happy he made me."

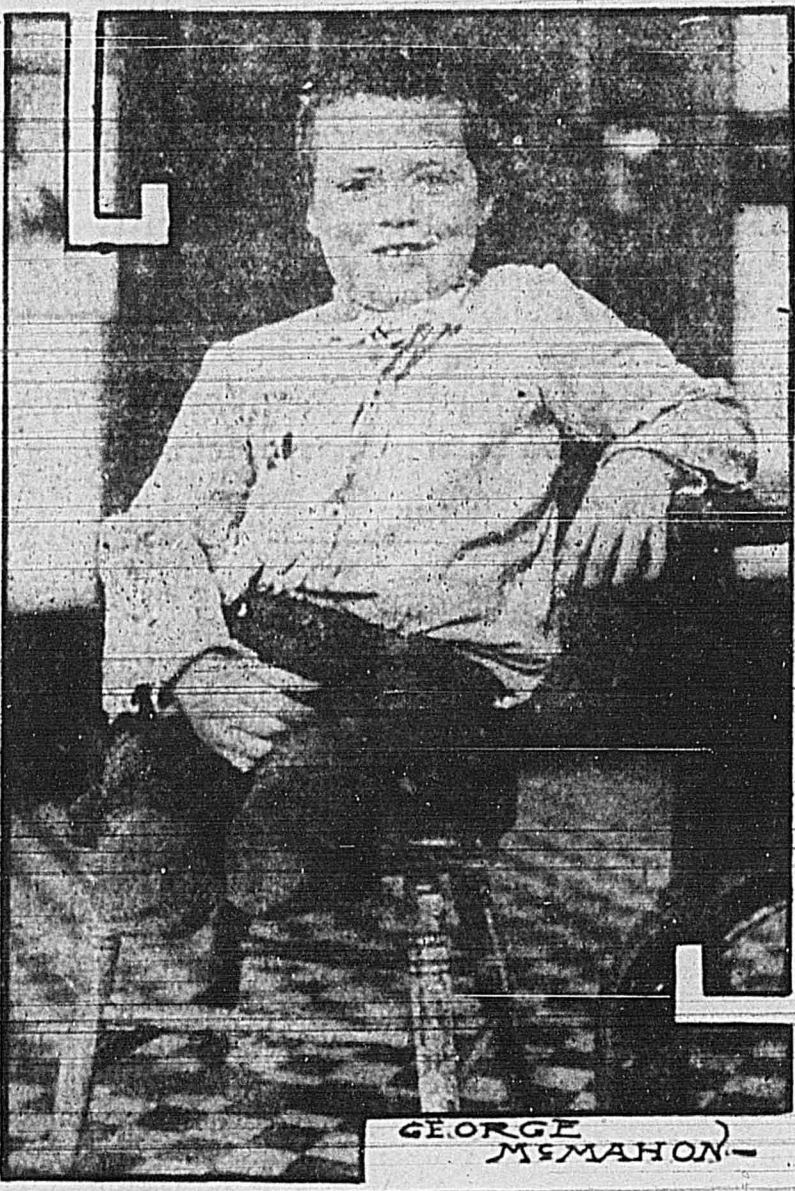

Education Next Beneficence.
Little Georgie's chance of home life are not very good. The best that can happen to the little fellow is to be placed in an institution where he can be educated. At the hospital there are no such facilities, and when the child was sent to a home recently in the hopes that he could get an education it was impossible to keep him on account of his indolence.

George remembers all about his trouble, but he doesn't like to talk about being sick in bed and paralyzed, and then coming to the hospital to have his legs cut off. He says he can all the time, who put the small, cheerful, little fellow.

"I wish I could thank the kind, good man who sent me my Valentine legs," said the little fellow. "I'll bet he's got a home, like my mamma. I'll send him a Valentine, don't you?"

"Some day when I'm a bookkeeper I'll go to New York and find him. I'll send him a Valentine. Then he will know how happy he made me."

GEORGE McMAHON—

WALKER GAVE UP BEARD TO AID FLIGHT

Absconder Shaved Just Before He Disappeared on Sunday.

That William F. Walker, the absconder treasurer of the Savings Bank of New Britain, Conn., carefully planned his flight is becoming more clear to those engaged in trying to find him.

The Evening World learned to-day that Walker shaved off his luxuriant beard on Sunday morning, and was last seen by those who knew him at the Cumberland Hotel, in this city, about noon that day.

The Evening World has traced Walker's movements from the time he reached New York on Friday afternoon until, with his appearance remarkably changed, he disappeared on Sunday. It is quite likely he is well on his way to some foreign clime.

Walker appeared at the Cumberland on Friday afternoon. He was well known to the clerk, Mr. Root, as he had stopped at the hotel frequently. Walker carried a small handbag and was in excellent spirits.

"I'd like to have my old room," he said, as he registered.

The room he had occupied on his previous visits was one of the cheapest in the house. He was known to the help as a very frugal guest.

"Have Money," He Said.
Mr. Root told him the room was occupied. Walker then said he would take a suite comprising a sitting-room, bedroom and bath. This evidence of extravagance surprised Mr. Root, and perhaps his face showed his feelings for Walker.

"I've got plenty of money, and I might as well spend it to make myself comfortable," he said.

He left the hotel early on Saturday and was gone all day. Late in the afternoon he sent the telegram to New Britain in which he announced, over an assumed signature, that he had been killed by a street car. About 11 o'clock Sunday morning a dapper man with a mustache waxed and curled up on the

HIGGINS A SQUARE MAN, IS PASTOR'S TRIBUTE AT BIER

State Officials Hear the Ex-Governor's Traits Told at Funeral.

OLEAN, N. Y., Feb. 15.—The body of ex-Gov. Higgins was laid to rest to-day in Mount View cemetery, following funeral services of a simple character.

Rev. Dr. Ashton, who was the ex-Governor's pastor, officiated, while in the throng of mourners were Gov. Hughes, ex-Governor Hill, Members of the Senate and Assembly and many State and local officials.

A crisp, sunny winter day contributed to the peace and simplicity of the occasion. The Episcopal burial was read at the former Governor's residence at 2 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. James W. Ashton, D. D., rector of St. Stephen's Church, of which Gov. Higgins was a member for twenty years.

George A. Lewis, sang "Abide with Me" and "Lead, Kindly Light."

Rev. Dr. Ashton, in his eulogy, said: "Gov. Higgins was a man of no ordinary creation. His life as a private citizen was of such a character that his passing away seems to have caused an irreparable loss. We unite to-day in a universal sorrow."

"I venture to speak also of the public career of ex-Gov. Higgins, for I knew him even in that relation of his life. His sincerity has never been questioned."

Never have the high offices of State been filled more honorably than by him. Under his leadership the State has been able to stand up to the world. He never did a wrong thing consciously or intentionally. He was not cold and unsympathetic, as political virtue sometimes makes a man, but made allowances for the mistakes of others. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

"Not what public opinion might pass upon my acts, not what men or newspapers say, but what I myself shall think of them after they are done."

He never did a wrong thing consciously or intentionally. He was not cold and unsympathetic, as political virtue sometimes makes a man, but made allowances for the mistakes of others. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

"As Senator, Lieutenant-Governor and Governor he has not the faintest shadow of reproach upon his name. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability."

Prior to this service from 11 A. M. to 12 noon the body lay in state in the drawing-room and was viewed by hundreds of people, including the official delegation.

Beside the casket stood former Mayor N. V. V. Franchot, who was perhaps the ex-Governor's closest personal and political friend, and who served under him as Superintendent of Public Works.

The house was filled with flowers representing tributes of esteem and affection from many sources. Among those who sent them were the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Gov. Hughes and the legislative committees, the Legislature, Correspondents' Association, former and present members of the Senate, and many others.

The body of the ex-Governor was placed in the receiving vault at the cemetery pending the building of a mausoleum.

100 RUSH OUT AS FIRE ATTACKS BIG APARTMENT

Lexington Avenue Cars Are Blocked While Building Is Saved.

More than a hundred tenants fled in wild disorder from the big seven-story apartment at No. 66 Lexington avenue to-day when an alarm of fire was given by an excited man, who ran into the hallway, shouting at the top of his voice. Everybody in the building started on the run to get into the street, and in about two minutes men, women and children, laden with all kinds of belongings picked up as they fled, were scrambling to make their escape.

The fire got its start suddenly in a small tailor shop at No. 46 Lexington avenue, which adjoins the apartment-house. Meyer Gussow, proprietor of the shop, started to get a large bottle of benzine down from a shelf above the shop.

He failed to get a good grip on the bottle and it fell on the range.

Instantly there was a flash of flame that trimmed the tailor's hair and whiskers short and sent him on the jump into the street. Before the fire engines could reach the scene, the flames had spread throughout the shop and the window frames on the first floor of the apartment-house were all ablaze. The firemen worked for nearly half an hour before the fire could be halted, and in the meantime the police reserves had all their hands full to reduce the panic-stricken people who had deserted their homes to an orderly file.

The fire lines halted at the Lexington avenue surface cars and the blockade was not broken for forty-five minutes. In that time the line of cars extended many blocks, and thousands of passengers hurrying downtown were compelled to desert the cars and reach their destinations by other routes.

When the fire had been extinguished the police turned in and helped the apartment dwellers to get their belongings back into the building. The flames did not get beyond the first floor, and the damage was estimated at about $1,500.

DIES FROM ELECTRIC SHOCK.
Accidental contact with a dynamo in the power-house of the Interborough Company, at One Hundred and Forty-sixth street and Seventh avenue last Sunday, resulted in the death of a young man, Samuel Burgess, an orphan. He was taken to Washington Heights hospital, where he died today in agony. Burgess lived with his wife and a child, eight years old, at No. 54 West One Hundred and Sixty-fifth street.

LITTLE BABY CURED OF ECZEMA

Parents Applied to Hospitals and Doctors but Could Get No Relief—Grew Worse Under Doctor's Prescription—Friends Recommended Cuticura—A Result

A SPEEDY AND PERMANENT CURE

"We express to you herewith our best thanks for the cure of our baby from eczema. The eczema appeared when the child was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. A physician recommended a salve which we threw into the fire after two days' use as the eczema became worse so that the baby scratched his face. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is as healthy as the other children. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. Even the poorest man can pay that instead of throwing it into the doctor's lap. I myself only make but I recommend the Cuticura Remedies strongly to all mothers whose children suffer from such diseases. They are cheap, harmless and good. C. F. Kara and Wife, 343 East 65th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

FOR SORE HANDS
Soak the hands on retiring, in a hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose, kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and holes cut in the palms, or a light bandage of old cotton.
